Profile

FISCHER's Administrative Litigation practice has many years of experience representing leading Israeli and international companies and is regularly selected to handle complex administrative disputes and proceedings in Israel.

We provide comprehensive litigation representation across the full range of administrative forums, including proceedings before the High Court of Justice, the Administrative Affairs Courts and other administrative tribunals, including tender-related tribunals and proceedings.

The practice has a strong track record of successfully litigating High Court of Justice petitions raising principled and precedent-setting issues, including representing business entities in matters with broad implications for the Israeli economy and for specific industries and sectors.

The practice also has extensive experience and recognized expertise in administrative petitions and disputes in the field of public tenders, including representation of authorities and tender participants, and the successful management of complex tender-related petitions involving a wide range of procurement issues.

We are particularly recognized for our expertise at the intersection of the business and public sectors in contentious settings. We combine deep knowledge of highly supervised and regulated markets with exceptional litigation capabilities and a practical understanding of how public-sector decisions are made and reviewed by the courts.

Our team includes leading practitioners who are frequently invited to speak at prominent conferences and professional forums, including events hosted by the Israel Export Institute and the Manufacturers Association of Israel.

The practice is consistently recognized for excellence by leading ranking guides such as Dun's 100, BdiCode and The Legal 500. Year after year, the practice and its lawyers are ranked among the leading teams and practitioners in the field.
